Nick has more than 25 years of experience representing lenders and investors in sophisticated real estate finance matters, including structured and mezzanine loans, construction financing, note-on-note financing, preferred equity investments, and joint ventures. He has negotiated intercreditor, co-lender, and participation agreements in connection with over $2 billion of mezzanine loan sales and syndications of senior and subordinate debt tranches. Nick also advises clients on debt restructurings, workouts, and single-asset and portfolio acquisitions and dispositions. A component of his practice involves property assessed clean energy (PACE) financing, where he helps clients access cost-effective, revenue-neutral financing for energy-efficient improvements and renewable energy systems, including both new originations and debt restructurings using PACE financing to address capital stack deficiencies.

Nick counsels clients on sophisticated real estate finance matters, drawing on extensive experience structuring creative solutions for challenging transactions. His prior background as a senior executive in real estate development gives him a practical understanding of the market dynamics and business considerations that shape his clients' objectives. This dual perspective—combining legal expertise with hands-on industry knowledge—enables Nick to guide clients through intricate financing scenarios with efficiency and commercial insight.
